Helping People Tackle Health Information Overload

An old-fashioned term for Friends and Family

Challenges Faced by Individuals Managing Health Issues

For themselves, aging parents, children and more. They are dealing with:

1. Emotional Stress
2. Physical Exhaustion
3. Administrative Load (the silent burden often overlooked)

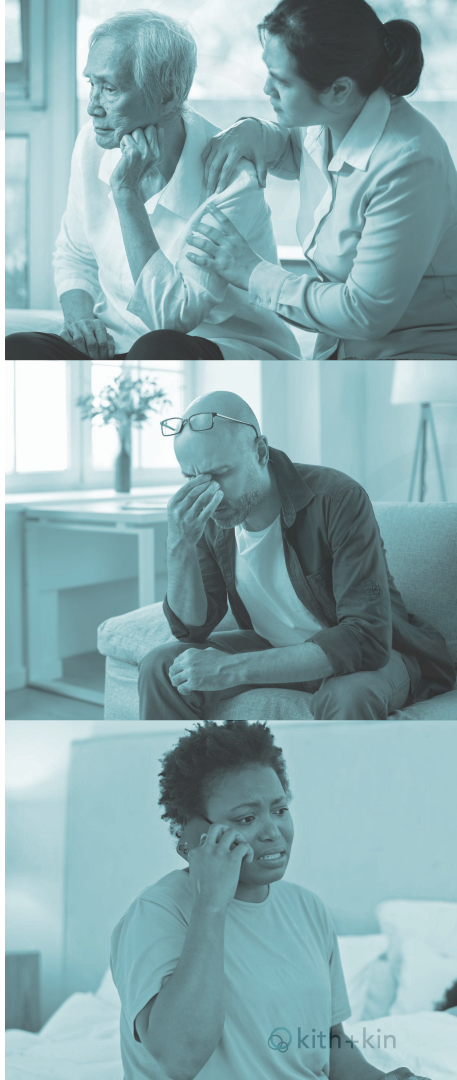
The KinKeeper is the person in their circle of friends and family (their Kith + Kin) who is managing all of this information for themselves or a loved one



The KinKeepers' Dilemma

Care extends far beyond the four walls of traditional healthcare systems

Healthcare is no longer tied to one provider or payer - telehealth, psychiatry, urgent care, non-traditional medicine and more

Care is multi-generational

People are caring for themselves, spouses, children in addition to their aging parents

Care circles transcend traditional nuclear family structures

One-to-one "patient" solutions don't reflect the modern family circles dealing with health issues

The KinKeepers' Common Need

All of their people and all of their info, all in one place

A place for information, not just data

To coordinate care and share different information with different people

the right information at the right place at the right time

They Need to Share Information . . . and Share the Load

The Impact

Reduced Time Pressure

AARP reports 61% of US KinKeepers are currently employed. American Academy of Physicians reports those with chronic conditions spend 2 hours per day managing that condition and CNBC reports those caring for others spend nearly double that at 4.3 hours per day.

83% report time savings

Reduced Burnout

The CDC reports 60% of Americans have at least one chronic condition. American Psychological Assoc notes 66% report one or more adverse mental health effects due to managing health issues, 30.7% report thoughts of suicide and 57% of family caregivers report high levels of stress, anxiety, and/or depression.

88% report reduced stress

Improved Health Outcomes

An American Academy of Family Medicine study showed that improved health confidence led to lower use of hospital care. The CDC reports growing evidence that people with higher skills and confidence to become actively engaged in their healthcare have better health outcomes.

91% report more confidence

Engagement

Traditional health information tools are confusing and underutilized 70% of patient portal users access their portal less than 6 times per year*

KinKeeper engagement is 10-20X the average portal engagement rate

70% of users use the app an average of 56 times per year

25% of users use the app an average of 127 times per year
